EPR Trillium LLP	London ON	Sandy Kirkwood-Pearce	Our firm is committed to recruiting and retaining the best talent possible for our clients' benefit whether they are men or women. Over the years we have found that women are extremely successful in our profession so we seek out strong women to be leaders and content experts for our firm. We invest in their careers through knowledge and skills development as well as with critical professional mentoring. Policy: With the majority of our firm's partners being women we are uniquely placed to assist young professional women in development of their careers throughout their lives. The firm's leadership provides role models for young professional women, mentors them in areas and ways that men take for granted but women have traditionally been hindered in accessing, and development of policies that acknowledge the demanding role that women continue to take within the family. We understand the balances and trade-offs that women have to make to maintain their career progress throughout their lives and attempt to ensure that they are able to maintain their career progression in sync with their male counterparts regardless of their circumstances.

Member of Parliament	Canada	Hon. Rona Ambrose	Canada is stronger when women have an equal opportunity to contribute to the social, economic and democratic life of our nation. Only by empowering women and girls to reach their full potential will Canada build a society that is strong and inclusive. For this reason, Canada's Economic Action Plan 2012 creates a new Advisory Council to secure more leadership opportunities for women on corporate boards and leverage the limitless talents of Canadian women. By working together, we will increase women's economic security today, and secure a bright future for girls in the economy of tomorrow. (Minister, Status of Women)

City of London	London ON	Mayor, Joe Fontana	On behalf of the Corporation of the City of London - Mayor Joe Fontana signed the Women's Empowerment Principles Statement of Support. London is an inclusive community which respects and values all cultures, ethnicities, genders, languages, ages, sexual orientations, religions, abilities, opinions and life experiences. It's a place where people are welcomed and want to be. The City of London has worked actively with community groups which support women, including the London Coordinating Committee To End Women Abuse to develop the award winning "1 Step Forward To End Violence and Abuse In My Community, Workplace and Home" training program delivered to all City employees. Signing the Statement of Support also aligned with the Corporation's commitment as an employer to attract a diverse workforce, reflective of our community and to create an inclusive and supportive workplace culture. The Women's Empowerment Principles are a helpful resource to assist the City in considering a "gender lens" with its inclusive practices.
